We've had almost eight years of the worst kind of math you can imagine. Oh my God, I can't believe it. Addition and subtraction of the 1s the 2s and the 3s. It's terrible.

4

8m

It's just terrible. Look, if you want to know what $2+2$ is, do you want to know what $2+2$ is? I'll tell you. First of all the number 2, by the way, I love the number 2.

It's probably my favorite number, no it is my favorite number. You know what, it's probably more like the Warning sad but earnest post: why are plumbers so expensive? They just stick plastic pipes together.

Why am I not a plumber? Why aren't you a plumber? Why don't we teach our students how to plumb so they can support their art practice by working like an hour a day? I'm 100% sure anybody can become a plumber in max 1 month.

For this position, we were looking for some one with a bit more digital content creation experience and/or a deeper understanding of realtime graphics (using C++). As the VR industry grows, I hope we'll have more room for talents like yours.

But right now, we're at a very small beginning and only had this one position available.

Take care,
Max

So, we have all these numbers, and we can add them and subtract them and add them. TIMES them even. Did you know that?

3

We can times them OR divide them, they don't tell you that, and I'll tell you, no one is better at the order of operations than me.

You wouldn't believe it. So, we're gonna be the best on 2+2, believe me.

sofa shapes, explained

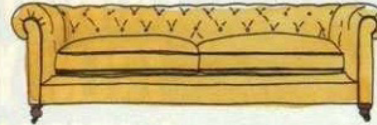

Always confusing your chesterfields with your camelbacks? Here's a cheat sheet to boost your style sophistication.

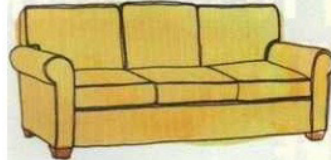

cabriole

VIBE: French sitting room; dainty and proper.
TRAITS: Exposed wood frame, often carved. Back unfurls into slightly lower arms in a continuous line. No back cushions.
TRIVIA: Cabriole legs often reference the limbs of dogs or lions.

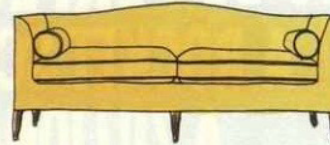

chesterfield

VIBE: 19th-century gentlemen's club.
TRAITS: Myriad tufts for a quilted effect. Low-slung. Rolled arms equal height of back. Often leather. No back cushions.
TRIVIA: Purportedly designed to allow men to sit straight, so their suits wouldn't wrinkle.

Lawson

VIBE: American casual; coziness first.
TRAITS: Firmly stuffed, with three back cushions. Arms lower than back; can be either rolled or square. Often skirted.
TRIVIA: Said to have been designed for comfort-seeking financier Thomas W. Lawson around the turn of the 20th century.

camelback

VIBE: 18th-century formal; upright and crisp.
TRAITS: Subtle rise at center of frame. Square arms about same height as back. Exposed legs. Slim and neat. No back cushions.
TRIVIA: Designed by Thomas Chippendale, whose name has become synonymous with this period in English home decor.

English rolled arm

VIBE: British country house circa 1900.
TRAITS: Tight, seamed back with small, recessed arms. Soft, generous seat cushions. Generally skirtless and often on casters. Comfortable and loungy.
TRIVIA: Also answers to "club sofa."

tuxedo

VIBE: 1920s modern; sleek and glamorous.
TRAITS: High, straight arms in line with streamlined back, often with a single row of tufts and exposed legs. No back cushions.
TRIVIA: A pet pick of decorator Billy Baldwin, designer to Jackie O. and Diana Vreeland.
